EMERGING MARKETS SPECIALIST NAMED AS ONE OF TOP BRITISH BUSINESSWOMEN

Emerging markets risk specialist and Managing Director of Marker Global, Dana Denis-Smith, has been named by Management Today as one of 35 top British businesswomen under 35.

"It is a privilege to be named alongside women who have contributed so much to the industries they represent and who have achieved an enormous amount early on in their careers," said Denis-Smith.

The list profiles influential young women who have excelled in their careers. The 2010 list features a number of entrepreneurs and business stars across a range of industries including finance, economics, advertising and the arts.

Taking on new challenges is something that comes easily to Denis-Smith. With an aptitude for seeking out new opportunities she has established Marker Global as a niche provider of business intelligence services for companies operating in emerging economies. In 2009 the company was awarded Highly Commended, Consultancy of the Year – only two years after being set up.

Denis-Smith has forged a career spanning journalism, the law and most recently as the head of Marker Global. With clients around the world, Denis-Smith leads a highly-skilled team of regional consultants to deliver exclusive information and analysis customised to her client's needs.

"We consistently aim to exceed our client's expectations – delivering information that they can apply to their transactions and use to successfully navigate their way in new markets."
